A capacity turnout of members gathered to hear an address by E. I. Gray, general manager of the Eastern Irrigation District, at the board of trade's first meeting in the new year, at the Imperial hotel.

Touching briefly on the history and physical features of the district, Mr. Gray stated this district was the best established one on the continent, and in respect to some features, the best in the world. The system now constructed by the C.P.R. has passed from an engineering stage into a phase of agriculture and economics, where the farmer is now paying for the land.

That the provincial government is running the district is a misconception that must be wiped out, asserted the speaker; the prime feature of the whole undertaking is the fact that the people in the tract have organized for the main purpose of selling water to them. The district is not a government project, this undertaking is similar in many respects to the organizing of municipalities, towns and villages.

Not having a government institution or having a corporation behind it and no one but the people to pay, the district is in a position to meet the expenditure. There is tragedy in doing this, the speaker said, an certain drastic steps had to be taken. But even so, in 1935 to meet the salaries alone of the permanent staff, an amount equivalent to $2 on acre on a irrigable land would be required. Going into the new year, this amount has been reduced to an amount equivalent to 70c an acre. The organization must live within its means and rely on water rate collections.

The ordinary irrigation district owns up to the fact that the function of a district is to sell water, and not to sell or hold land. The fact that the district owns land is a situation, and is getting out of it as quickly as possible. The land is being sold for very attractive prices, and to date the whole thing is a success. The water rate is $1.75 an acre. This is not a high rate and is very reasonable in comparison with other districts. The rate is not a high rate and is very reasonable in comparison with other districts. The rate is not a high rate and is very reasonable in comparison with other districts.

The anticipated policy for collections, said Mr. Gray, will be that if the district does not pay for water, it will not receive it. The district does not intend to develop a policy of haphazard delivery and seizures, and necessarily the sale of the water in kind or form. This proposed policy is sanctioned under the Irrigation act.

Seventy-five per cent of the successful irrigation districts in the inter-mountain area on the continent are successful because of feeding livestock. There is no better part of the land than for the raising of this type of farming, as it allows the development of a few acres of irrigable land, interspersed with cheap range for grazing livestock and horses. The past year has seen the greatest development in cattle feeding for many years. Lamb feeding has fallen off, but cattle and horses have been successful. This has been responsible for increasing the price of barley to the producer and the rise in the price of the water in kind or form. The normal carryover will be registered. This is a healthy situation, remarked the speaker.

As to the water rate, Mr. Gray answered several questions, in which he said that considerable study was being given to establishing water rates on spot water, and if the federal government continues its rehabilitation program, to obtain a series of dams on the irrigation project for "equalization" purposes, and he said his land for a higher price than he paid, under the new organization, but he obtained a clear title to his land. But, specifically, it is taken, and in the situation here, as at present, a good price is obtainable from the government. Several purchasers have been checked to avoid overloading with land.

LOCAL BONSPIEL

The annual curling classic, the Bassano bonspiel, is now in the final of the local trials.

Eleven local trials and seven visiting trials are taking part in the three events, the North Star Oil Ltd. challenge trophy, the Merchants event and the Consolidation.

During past years this bonspiel has been a local occasion for all curlers visiting part. Visitors have enjoyed themselves and have been satisfied with the manner of conducting the trial, and the members, pleased with the season's activities to date, plunge into the fray to make it an even better one.

The club executive are to be congratulated on the standard of play and the interest in curling established in Bassano, and our local merchants and neighboring business firms are to be thanked for the part they take in supporting Bassano's premier sport.

TOWN BASSANO PAYS SCHOOL TAX DEFICIT

Revealed: Town Supporting School by Paying Tax Deficit—Amounts to $21,619.40—Levy—Ratepayers Annual Meeting Jan. 31—Mayor 3 Councilors to be Elected Next Month.

That the town of Bassano made up the deficit of $21,619.40 of school taxes in 1935 was revealed at the meeting of the council Monday night. The school tax assessment for the past year amounted to $16,000; of this only $2,380 was collected, the balance of $13,620 was made up from the town's coffers.

With the reduction in assessment on surrounding lands and the inability of owners to pay even such taxes, due to bad crop conditions, the burden of the school cost is thrust on the shoulders of the council. Under present regulations by the government, the school or school of land cannot be used as an alternative of non-payment of taxes; therefore the town must cheerfully "shell out" regulations to keep the school on a working basis. This sum of $13,619.40, the major part of the town's deficit.

Under bylaw 214 J. R. Donaldson was appointed returning officer for the coming election at the first of the month when a major and three councilors are to be elected. Some of the following were reported back at the first quarterly meeting to be held in March, 1936. Reports were given by townsmen and councilmembers from Standard, Hussar, Chancellor, Chazy, Arrowood, Tudor, Rockford and Glenloch.

Correspondence dealt with two applications for consolidation of taxes being granted; a letter from the attorney-general's department stating that the school district was not subject to certain conditions and a restaurant license was granted. E. L. Skeritt was appointed deputy mayor for the next three months.

Report of Town Engineer During the month of December there were three barials; the sidewalks were cleared of snow by men on relief; a leak in the water service was repaired; a sewer obstruction was cleared; both pumps at the station were operated and found in good condition.

Bassano W. I. Notes

The regular meeting of the Bassano W. I. was held at the home of E. Corbett on Tuesday, January 7, with the president, Mrs. Bacon presiding.

Local public-spirited business men and merchants have generously contributed to the prize list in the annual Bassano bonspiel by donating the finals. Four Calgary firms have responded to the request with valuable prizes worthy of any curler's possession.

The North Star Oil Limited has donated a trophy in an event to be called after the company's name. Five trustees will be appointed for the trophy after the bonspiel, representing the towns of Bassano, Brooks, Chazy, Glenloch and Strathmore, when the cup will be converted into a challenge trophy open to all clubs in Bow Valley.

In keeping with the spirit of the campaign, North Star agents at the above towns have donated four curling jackets for first prizes to the winner of the trophy. The T. Beaton company offers four plaques as a second prize. Dr. A. G. Scott, Dr. W. P. Keith, W. K. Webb and Wm. McLaws are regarded as the professional men in Bassano have donated 2 trays with cigarette boxes and 2 cigarette lighters contained in a cigarette case. Four plaques have donated two plaques with cigarette boxes and two plaques.

Merchants' Event The Calgary Power Co. Ltd. was the donor of four bridge lamps as first prize in the merchants' competition. A. McKee and Jas. Johnston have given four silk scarves; A. T. Connolly four cups and saucers, and Louis Combs four boxes of cigars.

The fourth prize in the consolation event is donated by Pat's Quick Lunch and the New Royal Cafe, being four boxes of cigars.

With such a fine array of prizes and a new trophy to play for, competing against the 11 local trials and seven visiting trials is exceptionally keen, as the curling club nears the completion of what promises to be the finest bonspiel held in Bassano.

Crowfoot

CROWFOOT, Jan. 7.—The holiday season is now over and the bridge roads are thinking of getting down to work. The following were making it over on an occasional bit of practice.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Holburn and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Holburn were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hartley on New Year's Eve. Mr. and Mrs. M. Milroy and Mr. and Mrs. L. Milroy were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Roberge, Rita, Irene and Doreen were dinner guests at the Hellebore house New Year's Eve. Syd. William and Arthur Bodinore and Verl Campbell were also guests for the evening to watch the old year out and the new year in. A very enjoyable evening was spent in dining.

Mr. and Mrs. Herpich were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Milroy on New Year's Day. Mr. and Mrs. Elton Herpich and family, Earl Herpich and Gordon were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Nall.

Quite a number from this vicinity attended the dance in Bassano New Year's Eve. Some of the guests who enjoyed the time at the dance, though some had difficulty in getting home.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake Robertson and Mr. and Mrs. Verl Campbell and Verl were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Holton on New Year's Day.

Jackie Weeks left last Thursday for Winnipeg where he will attend school. George Hray spent New Year's Day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hray.

Many first year enthusiastic hunters decided the rabbit population was getting too thick so they started out to decrease the said population and, although there were nine hunters, the boys only brought back two. Had they had a great day and next time we'll know how to do it.

May God forbid our musing on this page the things that merely please. We would be humble in our opinions; we would be considerate of the opinions of others; but we would not be unwilling of the immutable laws of cause and effect; for therein lies the wisdom of the ages.

AN INTERNATIONAL DILEMMA

France and Great Britain are in a deep dilemma as far as the Italo-Ethiopian war is concerned, and that was the real inspiration behind the abortive effort towards peace which cost Sir Samuel Hoar his position in the British cabinet.

Neither country, and particularly Britain, is anxious to see Italy gain a sweeping victory and completely conquer Ethiopia. Also neither country wants to see the herds of Selassie's warriors win from the Italians.

A victory for Ethiopia would be disastrous to the European nations who have possessions inhabited by dark-skinned people. The supremacy of the white man in Africa and Asia would be dealt a crushing blow. That is the last thing either Britain or France desires.

So a peace plan was patched up which gave the Italians even more than they demanded of Ethiopia in the first place. Naturally this was a shock to the uniformed multitudes who imagined that the great powers were leading a "holy" campaign in favor of the smaller defenceless peoples of the earth.

So great was the shock that the proposed plan had to be repudiated and Premier Baldwin's government "lost face" in the process.

But eventually some such plan will likely be decided on. The Italians will get a good foothold in Ethiopia, which means the beginning of the end of freedom for that country.

Italy would never do to have the power and prestige of a white nation discredited before the immense hordes of "brunettes".

THE OPPORTUNITY AND THE HOPE

The most important event of the past year in this district was the taking over by the settlers of the Eastern Irrigation District. Thus was launched one of the most interesting experiments in agriculture ever undertaken in Canada.

The settlers now own a gigantic area of land upon which has been built a comprehensive and expensive irrigation system. They got it on advantageous terms. It now rests with them to make it a success or a failure.

But success will not be gained without hard and frequently discouraging work without careful and astute planning; without avoidance of sectionalism and intestine strife. One sure rule of life is that nothing worth while is gained without a struggle. Nothing worth while comes easily or effortlessly.

When the aged Masaryk and his astute disciple, the clever Benes, took over the reins of power in Czech-Slovakia after the war—virtually Socialists, both of them—they advised their people to work harder than ever, and to work together. It was only by stupendous effort that the new and untied nation got itself into a position of comparative economic security.

People working energetically and faithfully together can accomplish great things. It is the feeling of exploitation that so ruins works.

So if fortune smiles a little more kindly and the people of the irrigation district are benefitted thereby, and can work together for the good of all, there is success at the end of the road.

CANADIANS ABROAD

"From their folded mates they wandered far,
Their ways seem harsh an dwild;
They follow the stars, Charles,
Their paths are dream-beguiled."

The fact that a Canadian, Charles Collier, is governor of the Bank of Ethiopia and a power behind Haile Selassie in Addis Ababa, was recently made known. Born in New Brunswick, this man has risen to a prominent place in world affairs.

Canadians are somewhat of a vagabond breed and are found all over the world, Canadian boys trained in Canadian banks are (or were before the depression) acceptable in banking circles in many countries and notably in the United States.

The oil fields of Western Ontario, centering around Petrolia, turned out scores of oil drillers and workers in various capacities and literally these men could be found wherever oil gushes from the earth's surface, from Batu to Peru.

Canada's lumber industry turned out men who found ready takers for their services in many distant forests and lumbering centres. Canadian mail miners, prospectors and geologists are among the leaders in that field of activity. They take second place to none.

There was a time when sailors from the Canadian maritimes were scattered over the seven seas and shipbuilders from the same source over six continents.

Canadian farmers have not scattered so widely, but wherever they have gone the same traditions of courage, efficiency and audacity have been upheld.

The dominion has also furnished teachers, preachers, financiers and parliamentarians to many countries, notably Great Britain and the United States. Nor have they been least in their achievements away from home.

Canada has bred able men and women and will continue so to do as long as our people maintain their virile outlook on life along with ambitions to accomplish things of moment.

LATE NEWS FROM HERCULES

Fifteen hundred years ago, when the Roman Empire was showing the first faint signs pointing toward disintegration, a terrific explosion occurred in Hercules, swinging lambent in the faraway heavens.

Just last year news of catastrophic event reached the earth. A British amateur meteor observer was the first to see the peculiar light in the vicinity of that great star.

Astronomers all over the world turned their telescopes toward Hercules and, sure enough, a "new star" had flared into being where nothing was visible before. Their calculations reached the conclusion that the explosion which formed the "nova Hercules" occurred 1500 years ago and all that time was occupied in lighting the light waves to reach the earth.

Meanwhile in history the Roman Empire had fallen into decay and ruin; the Moslem world had reached a high peak of power—almost world supremacy—and then receded; the Frankish confederacy waxed and waned; Spain sprang into world leadership with the discovery of the Americas and then declined from the day her armada met its fate at the hands of British ships.

All these long years the light rays were speeding towards earth but Hercules looked the same until the messengers of terrific events reached here a few months ago. They told of an explosion in which clouds of gas were ejected with a speed so tremendous that in comparison an earthly explosion is like the crawling of a snail.

This comparatively unimportant incident in the life of the incalculable universe should teach mankind to be a little more philosophical concerning the importance of the human life span and what can be achieved therein.

DIAGNOSIS

An aged man at the railway station
Discussed the business situation,
I said that things were mighty bad,
And, somehow or other, it made him mad.
That aged man, he tapped my knee—

"D'ye know what's wrong with things?" said he.

"I've been in 'tights" said he, the old boy glared.

"And I've always got whipped when I get scared.

Folks have forgot how to stand an' grin

When hard luck socks 'em 'em on the chin.

There's too much groanin'—not enough laughin'—

Too many crepe-hangers—too many graphs—

I sure don't help a sick man's heart

To think of nothin' but his fever chart.

There's too many experts tellin' how come.

The whole blame world is on the bum.

There's too many people with an allibi—

I'd rather than to a darn good lie!

As soon as folks suit havin' crepe

I've got business in I darn good shape!

I've no use for golf as a game,

But I sponser 't language, just the same!

There's too few drivers, an' too many putts—

Plenty cold feet, and not enough gait!

You ain't my son, but if you was mine,

I'd darn soon teach you not to whine!"

He wasn't cultured and his words were rough
But the old boy seemed to know his stuff.

FROM ISAIAH 62

How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth! . . . Behold, my servant shall stand dutifully, he shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high. As my were astonished at thee; his visage was so marred more than any man, and his form more than the children of men: So shall he sprinkle many nations; the kings shall shut their mouths at him: for that which had not been told them they shall see; and that which they had not heard shall they consider.

Ten Minutes with the Scotch Philosopher

First of all, we propose to relate how we came to suffer a doublecross at the hands of a ten-minute Canadian. Early in December, this bright youth came to our party abode with a very funny tale he wanted converted into rhyme, so that he could recite it at the Christmas dinner. By the mutual consent of the boy and the farmer, it was decided to make his dad the villain of the piece and, having enjoyed that fellow's friendship for many years, we proceeded to enlarge on the peculiarities, which all men, more or less, possess.

Quite so. But when the great evening arrived, the youngster walked onto the stage with a confident smile, tipped us at a knowing wink, and then proceeded to make us the goat of the play. Not content with this, he imitated the farmer's speech and gestures in such a highly amusing fashion that the crowd simply kept with joy.

Later on, we learned the bit had received fifty cents from his dad to make the switch.

Wasn't that a pippen of a come-lack!

Advertising over the radio has become such a fine art that we are getting a little bit scared of it.

Rather late, the other evening, we turned the dial on for a little entertainment before retiring.

Just what I was to hear a fine chortle finishing up a beautiful old melody, and as the music faded away, a solemn voice intoned: "Butcher that a swell funeral could be had at it at modest price."

Boy! We didn't take long to shut that out, but the old shock still seems a bit spooky after dark.

"Fair and warmer, with light easterly winds" was the weather forecast we received over the air five or six weeks ago.

Good, but when we looked through the window at the break of morn, a chilly, blustering blizzard was rolling out of the northwest.

This kind of error has happened so often in the past, we have come to the conclusion that the weather man has more than a hazy acquaintance with our old friends Jack Dewar and Johnny Walker. But we must not discuss this matter any further or the government might have us pinched for advertising favorite brands of mirth-provokers.

A lad from near Brooks, who desires to be known as "Jack", writes to wish us a happy new year, and also to ask why we are not rooting a little bit harder for Social Credit. Thanks for the greeting, lad, and although we've got a feeling you're foolish, we will answer you in this way:

Failing to see how we can improve on the present happy condition, we are permitting our enthusiasm to accumulate until the arrival of the first of January, that we may celebrate a right jolly fashion. The bangpans are tuned up to the right pitch, so if you see a stubby looking old boy with the knees of his kilt all worn out, heading the parade, that'll be me, Jack. In the meantime, my not learn to play the big drum and make your self useful too?

Just at the time when the League of Nations seemed to be making some progress in its efforts to shorten the war in Africa, along came that ungodly proposal from Britain and France to hand over control of Ethiopia to Italy. Fortunately, the outraged people of the motherland wrecked the plan, but it will be a long time before the small nations of Europe again look at Britain with trusting eyes. Much talk is still abroad concerning the possibility of a mad dog act by Mussolini, but that contention is not yet who's insane.

With the three great war-battlehips, now based in the Mediterranean—the only craft of their kind in the world by the way—the British navy could engage the Italian fleet and entirely destroy it, with little loss to itself. Mussolini is fully aware of this, and so long as the promise of success lures him on in Ethiopia, he'll content himself with the mere threat of his sword. However, if things should go wrong with his African adventure—something not beyond the realm of possibility—there there is no saying what he'll do. His highly strung people might go. Meanwhile, it is interesting to note that during the week centred on Christmas the Italian people had earnestly for victory.

In Lighter Vein

Recently a church congregation in a little Kansas town built a new church. To pay for it they were obliged to call on the merchants of the community for donations. The merchants responded liberally and $200 was raised. But that source the last man asked to subscribe was John Smith, a merchant. "I will give you $10 if you will allow me to add something to the list," he said. The permission was granted and he wrote at the foot of the list:

John Smith . . . $10.00
Mail Order House . . . $10.00
Puddler and Transient . . . $10.00

The church people saw the point when the minister read from the pulpit a list of the donors to the building fund, and since the dedication of that church there have been no more mail orders sent out of that town. Exchange.

This moral has a real significance in Carleton at the present time—although our townsmen takes the cake. He sent out his appeal in envelopes that were printed out of town. Carleton Chronicle.

A cowpuncher ordered a steak at a restaurant. The waiter brought it in rare—very rare. The cowpuncher looked at it and demanded that it be front and a hefty cut in the rear has wrung many strange comments from the "poor bewildered waiter".

One of the fears of those bowed from the lips of a deposit African king had been short of his glory, for seeking to chastise the white king who was feuded with various kings of his feudal domain. This is how the humiliated old chieftain merely put it: "When you deposit dat ten dollars!"

"Eleven years ago."

"Eleven years!" Man, dat was eaten up long ago by de interest."

returned to the kitchen and cooked. "It is cooked," snapped the waiter. "Cooked—nothing," replied the cowboy. "I've seen cows hurt worse than that and get well."

This is an old story, but one which can bear repeating: At a football match, two kilted men—one English, the other Scotch—got into conversation. The Englishman, contrary to tradition, possessed the bottle.

That was a fine shot," said the Scotch.

"It was," said the Englishman, and took a deep draught out of the bottle, immediately replacing it in his pocket in spite of Sandy's thirsty glance.

Suddenly a goal was scored.

"Drawn" goal," said the Scot.

"Fine," returned his companion, and applied the bottle to his lips once more. Still he did not offer to treat his neighbor.

"Here's a bit of a football player yerse!" I see," remarked Sandy. "Yes, I am," was the proud reply. "I think that," said the Scot, dryly. "I can see yer's a grand dribbler, but man, yer's nae guld at passin'!"

Milkman (to suspicious customer):

You won't find nothing wrong with that, ma'am. All our milk's been analyzed by a government analyst.

It was a negro bank. The staff and the customers were all colored. One day a depositor came in to withdraw ten dollars. That was an important transaction, so the teller passed him the money, and the following dialogue took place:

"When did you deposit dat ten dollars?"

"Eleven years ago."

"Eleven years!" Man, dat was eaten up long ago by de interest."

Make the Penny Bigger by reading the ads

When John A. was Premier and tall beaver hats were in vogue; when gentlemen wore broad cravats and ladies wore hoop skirts, the pennies they tossed to children were as big as half-dollars.

A penny then might buy a pastry, or ten of them take one to the Fair, but your great-uncle and great-aunt couldn't have gone to a movie at any price.

Sixty years ago the ladies could go shopping for dry goods and buy silks that would make you green with envy, linens that were flannels and broadcloths that beggar description. But what their favorite store did not have they usually got along without.

You can pick up your newspaper and in fifteen minutes you can know what the different shops are offering in fabrics, patterns, varieties and qualities that great-grandmother never dreamed could be gathered together under any conditions.

Times have changed, and so have merchandise and business methods. One of the influences that has helped to bring about so much change, that has helped to multiply opportunities and increase the spending size of our pennies is advertising.

Every merchant, every manufacturer, knows that advertising materially reduces selling costs by increasing the demand for and the distribution of the products of hundreds of thousands of mills. Indeed many of the things we count today as necessities or simple luxuries could not be made and sold at their reasonable prices except for advertising, has created a broad market for them, making millions of sales at little prices and little profits.

HER FUNERAL

(Dedicated to the Anderson family)

The church was fairly crowded with humble folk from far and near.

Gathered to pay their last respects to a neighbor, by all held dear.

A mother who was of stalwart sons, but the mother love of her heart found faith on youth and maiden fair.

As tears from the eyelids start.

To all alike she was most kind, And helpful in every work of charity!

Her goodness, kindness and cheery air, Made her a life of greatest rarity.

The preacher, a comrade true and tried, Talked to all as friend to friend; Of this balm of sterling worth As her generous strength she'd spend.

He talked of this as the world of joy, And Up There as the world of living;

Of God as the refuge and the light, With love His ceaseless comfort giving.

And then the song that was sung so softly by her younger son, and a friend so true,

Brought tears and the deepest comfort to all As he pictured Up Yonder in radiant hue.

The thought was of healing force, indeed, We say, "Good night, here,"—unending—

But "Good morning, Up There," was the message, In pure tones their voices blending.

Then slowly the sad procession moved, Wending east along the country way,

Where, midst cold and pure white snow, We laid the remains of our friend away.

But she is not dead, she will live for us— For her husband, and sons, and every friend,

Because the good works of a cheerful soul, With infinite tenderness, never can end.

PUSH CANADIAN SALE OF FOUR

Military Claim Stabilization Policy of Government Adversely Affects

Export of Flour

The suggestion has been advanced that a specially organized board may be formed to work in conjunction with the wheat board to push the sales of Canadian flour throughout the world. The idea is said to be that of Hon. Chas. Dunning and Hon. T. A. Cregar and it is believed that the report has been circulated for the purpose of seeing how the public will take it. Canadian flour millers have maintained that they have been placed in an untenable position through the operation of the federal government stabilization policy. They say that this kept the domestic price of wheat so high above the world level that Canadian flour exports amounted to a trickle. It is also contended by flour millers that it is through exportation of flour from Canada that consumers in other countries first learned of the value of the Canadian product and the flour can find its way into markets where wheat cannot. The millers also maintain their purchases of Canadian wheat provide the most consistent and most valuable market for the wheat growers and that the extension of flour exports would be of immense benefit to the whole wheat-raising industry.

ABOUT THE LADIES

Women are what men marry as a last feasible attempt to put an end to the 24-hours-per-day pursuit which plagues his waking hours from birth till the day he finally is laid to rest in the altar against his better judgment.

When he at last "catches" a woman, he caught.

Strangely enough, women also possess two arms and two legs, but unlike men they are equipped with multiple minds—like they could not change them so often.

Woman was created from man's rib, which is why so many men dislike surgery—look at the mess the first operation got him into! How true are the words: "God created the world, and then He created. Then He created man, and rested again. Then He created woman, and neither God nor man has rested since."

All in all, women may be divided into two classes, those who are married and those who would like to be married.

In woman's opinion, a man becomes conciliated when he acquires enough intelligence to recognize the wiles and various modes of approach of the female of the species, and becomes infinitely conciliated when he lets them know that he sees their game.

Woman is born into the world with an unquenchable zeal to remodel man. Witness the number of women who say they married such and such a man "to reform him." If they forget this bit of hypocrisy and openly think the Lord that they got a man of all, which they do, and the divorce courts would cease to exist.

When they can no longer change their husbands, they start shifting the furniture around.

Is it not a psychological marvel that a "soft, fluffy, violet-scented sweet little thing should enjoy kina-kina, a black-eyed, stocky, thick-tubed, and far-ramuncated thing like a man?" Woman is born with an inferiority complex and, although in some cases this is almost automatic, those who do not at present feel inferior to any man spend all their time trying to convince, that someday there will be a man come along who they can feel inferior to.

It is hopeless when she is being dominated, vociferations to the contrary notwithstanding.

If you flatter a woman, she calls you a liar, while she really agrees with your statements. If you don't, she declares your lack of observation.

If you make love to them, they immediately try to simulate chastity—touchability, while if you don't, they rush posthaste to the half-dresser, commettion, and psychomotorial to find ways and means to make you make love to them.

If you believe everything a woman tells you, she thinks you are a fool, and she is right. If you don't, sometimes out of ten you are better off.

If you are a steady home, one woman type, she is thrilled. If you are just a plain, garden variety of a male, she is still thrilled.

If you ask for a divorce, she will not give it to you because it would deprive her of somebody to hate out "better late than never."

If you ask her to have a drink or smoke, she says that you are a bad influence. If you don't ask, she says you're a stuffy old conventionalist.

If, well, anyhow, in spite of all the contradictions of character, men continue to marry women and women continue to marry men, as a hurried glance at the vital statistics will show. Perhaps some day they will learn better, but for the time being nothing better has been devised.

P.S.—The author of the above has left for an extended vacation in the more inaccessible regions of Africa.

THE WHEAT BOARD

Claim Wheat Board Policy of Getting Rid of Surplus Wheat Has Proved Successful

Hon. Jas. G. Gardiner, federal minister of agriculture, is conducting a campaign for the Assiniboia seat for Saskatchewan, William Irvine, ex-Alberta M. P., being his opponent.

Hon. Mr. Gardiner made some reference to the 1936 Wheat Pool settlement and the Wheat Board affairs in his campaign speeches. With reference to the 1936 pool he said that the money would be paid as soon as the auditors supplied certification. If the auditors did not approve of the payment, he added, "we will sit down with the Wheat Pool to get a proper agreement under which a proper amount can be paid."

Mr. Gardiner said that the Wheat Board had 298 million bushels of wheat on its hands when the new government went into office. A policy calculated to get rid of the wheat quickly was adopted. As a result 42 million bushels have been sold in two weeks, including a one-day business of 23 million bushels the day Argentina announced its new policy.

THE COST OF WAR

According to the League of Nations Society in Canada the great war cost Canada $1,435,000,000. How much is that? It means an expenditure equal to $2,400 a day since the beginning of the Christian era, that is to say, $2,400 a day for 1,325 years. Civilization is said to have begun 10,000 years ago; $1,435,000,000 represents an expenditure of 1400 a day since the beginning of civilization.

The great war cost the belligerents $321,600,000,000. What does this mean? The war lasted from August 1, 1914, to November 11, 1918. During the whole of that period the war cost an average of $100,000 per minute or $9,000,000 per hour. It means $470,000 per day since the beginning of the Christian era or $100,000 per day since the beginning of civilization.

Because of that war Great Britain must raise $1,000 every minute of every day in the year to meet war debts and the annual payment represents the whole time labor of 5,000,000 men. Because of that war 600 in every dollar of taxation in Great Britain goes to pay war debts.—The Manitoba Co-operative.
